Re: Verizon Communications Inc. and MCI, Inc., Applications for Approval of Transfer of Control, WC Docket No. 05-75

Dear Ms. Dortch:

In its response to specification 8.c of the Commission's May 5, 2005 initial information and document request, Verizon indicated that it had no "engineering capacity planning documents or marketing analyses that discuss the anticipated number of transit customers and/or the volume of associated traffic for the years 2005 and 2006," because Verizon does not provide transit services. The staff subsequently asked Verizon to provide these types of documents to the extent they relate to ISP customers generally.

Verizon has determined that several such documents have already been provided as part of Verizon's original response to the Commission's May 5 request. The first page of these documents are identified by the following bates numbers: VZFCC-074-0000316, VZFCC-068-0000810, VZFCC-068-0000808, and VZFCC-068-0000814. In addition, Verizon has located three additional documents that were not part of the original production and that could be considered relevant. Those documents are attached to this letter. As these various documents show, Verizon's revenue from ISP customers is declining as ISPs change their business models to focus on becoming content providers.
